The Way of Inflation

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

If a merchant, or a farmer, or the average householder persistently spends more than he earns, he goes broke. He pays for his folly in the wreck of his business, his property, and, perhaps, his career.

With governments it can be different. From time to time various nations have indulged in continued reckless expenditures, yet escaped immediate collapse. How? By resort to the desperate remedy of inflation—whether of currency or of credit.

The difference is that the individual bears the brunt of the blow himself, while governments pass it on to their citizens.

History has demonstrated this on many occasions. Perhaps the best remembered example of recent years is that of Germany, where post-war inflation brought hardship and hunger to millions of workers. Records do not show that the clever politicians who brought it all about, or the very rich, went hungry. That was reserved for the average run of citizens, who saw prices rise so swiftly that neither earnings nor savings could keep pace with them.

For a while the situation grew so serious that workmen found it necessary to demand pay for their services at the end of each day's labor. They knew that if they waited, prices might mount so rapidly that even a week's pay couldn't buy one bowl of soup.

Germany's experience was not an isolated one. It has been duplicated to a lesser degree in many countries and in many periods of history. It is because of the evidence such experiments offer, that an increasing number of thoughtful Americans oppose the course of reckless government expenditure that causes inflation.

The concern of such citizens is not for the very rich and the very shrewd—who know just when to buy and sell, or how to rig or play the stock market. It is rather for the average family that depends on a weekly or monthly wage for income, and a savings account or life insurance policy for security. Those are the people who shoulder the burden and suffer the hurts of inflation.

And those are the people who can stop its course.

They face a great responsibility. Under our Constitution the conduct of national affairs rests ultimately in their hands. If they insist on reasonable economy, the men who represent them in government must obey the mandate. If they remain indifferent, they encourage either the burden of increased taxes, or the still heavier toll of inflation with all its golden opportunities for the speculator, and its grim penalties for the worker.

Native Sons To Receive Grand Officer Visit Soon

On Thursday evening, February 20, Charles K. Kohnig, Past Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West will pay an official visit to Menlo Parlor, No. 185, N. S. G. W., at their meeting place, in the Masonic hall.

The officers of the local Parlor are making every preparation for this visit and are urging that all members make it a point to be on hand at this time.

Menlo Parlor is one of the oldest parlors in the state and has a most enviable roceord for holding its members and the Parlor is in a very flourishing condition at this time.

There is no doubt of the cordial reception that will be given the Past Grand President on this, his first official visit of the year to the Menlo Park natives.

ROBERT PETER CAIN LAID TO REST YESTERDAY

Robert Peter Cair, aged five years and nine months, passed away at the Community Hospital at Beresford, Monday morning, after a short illness.

Little Robert was born in Palo Alto and was the son of Mr. and Msr. Robert F. Cain of 1020 Chestnut street, Menlo Park. He was a loveable lad with a sunny nature that made for him friends of all with whom he came in contact, and his passing will leave many warm friends who will mourn his loss almost as deeply as his parents.

Private funeral services were held yesterday morning from the Tinney Funeral Home in Palo Alto.

"Aren't you going to put a wet paint sign on that fence?"

"What! and get finger prints all over it?"

Political Life of Frank Knox

Active Party Worker and Campaigner Since Spanish War.

In his busy and colorful career as a newspaper editor, soldier and party worker, Frank Knox, candidate of the Illinois Republicans for the nomination for president, has been one of the most widely traveled public men in the country. Not only has he been in every state in the Union, some of them many times, but his interviews with the heads of governments in Europe last year resulted in a series of editorials in his newspapers on the trends of governments at home and abroad which attracted both national and world-wide attention.

He has been a sectional or national figure in every national political campaign for a quarter of a century and in the past two years, in an effort to rouse Americans generally to the dangers he felt were fundamental in the "new deal" policies, Knox has made speeches in more than half the states of the Union. As a result of this task undertaken, for the most part, in answer to specific invitations for his services, he finds himself today projected into the political limelight in an honorable, although personally unsought, manner.

Starting as a precinct party worker in Michigan in 1898, Frank Knox helped nominate and elect Chase Osborn as governor of that state and was state chairman of the state committee in 1910. That fight was made by progressive and liberal Republicans, with Osborn and Knox in the lead, against monopolies that were dominating the state. In 1912, feeling that President Taft had lost his popularity in the state, Knox declined to become Taft's state manager and frankly told Mr. Taft he favored Theodore Roosevelt.

When Theodore Roosevelt became the candidate of the Progressive Party for president, Knox followed him, but at the same time got from Mr. Roosevelt a promise that the Progressive Republican state officers of Michigan should be renominated and only a Progressive electoral ticket placed in the field by the new party in that state. As chairman of the state committee Knox called the state convention to order and was elected its chairman. Thereupon Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, national chairman of the Roosevelt campaign, to the utter astonishment of Knox, made a speech demanding the nomination of an entire Progressive Party ticket from Governor down to constable. This was wholly contrary to Knox's understanding with Roosevelt, but in a hasty conversation, Dixon insisted he was carrying out orders from Roosevelt given him in Oyster Bay a few days before.

With characteristic honesty, Knox promptly advanced to the rostrum and resigned both as chairman of the convention and as chairman of the state committee. He was followed to his room by party leaders who begged him to accept the nomination for Governor, but he refused. A year and a half later, when Theodore Roosevelt heard the facts he admitted he gave Dixon the orders but added: "Frank, I forgot to except Michigan."

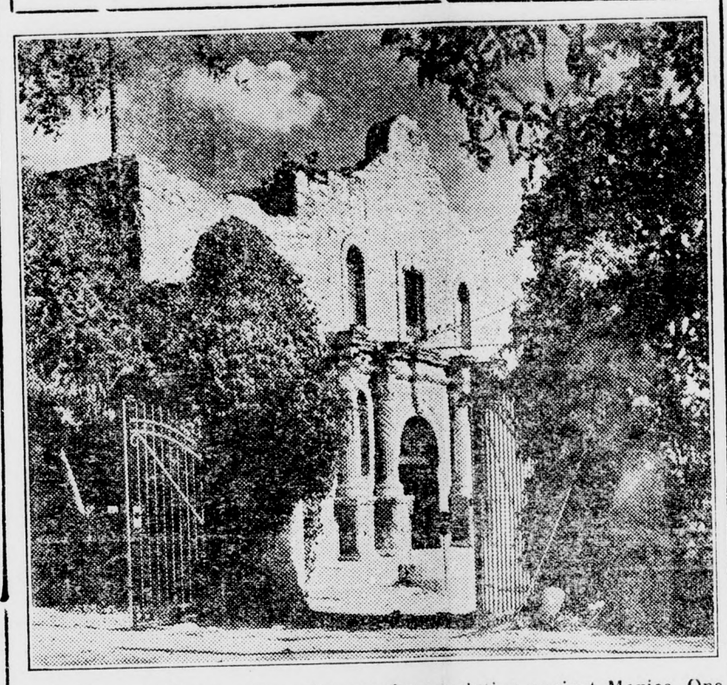
In 1916 Knox campaigned in New England for the election of Charles E. Hughes for president. He had, in the meantime, acquired a newspaper at Manchester, N. H., which he still owns. He did a like party service for Harding and for Coolidge, besides assisting in the nomination and election of numerous governors, senators, members of Congress, state and local officers. In 1912 President Taft made Knox a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners.

As general manager of the Hearst chain of papers in 1928, Knox did not participate in the party politics of that year but his business interests took him into every section of the country. It is noteworthy that Mr. Hearst that year brought his newspapers to the support of the Republican ticket.

In 1931 Frank Knox, in partnership with Theodore T. Ellis of Worcester, Mass., bought The Chicago Daily News. When the panic of 1932 began Knox was national chairman of the drive against the hoarding of gold and, as such, visited many sections of the country. He was strongly urged to accept the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and so peremptory was the demand that, when in Europe in 1934, he had to decline the honor categorically. The same year he assisted both the Republican Senatorial and Congressional committees in an advisory capacity and spoke for Republican candidates in Maine, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois.

In this way Frank Knox has not only a wider personal acquaintance than most public men of the day but, through his wide travels and his newspapers, he is also intimately informed of public opinion in all sections of the country daily.

Sunset Over Historic Alamo



A Texas twilight adds softness to this photograph study of the Alamo Mission, historic Texas shrine of Liberty, in the center of San Antonio Here 182 Texans died to a man, defending the mission in the revolution against Mexico. One hundred years later the Texas Centennial Exposition, opening at Dallas June 6, pays tribute to the Alamo's gallant defenders.

Local Men Join Veterans Of Foreign Wars Post

James Lindsey Wilson Post, No. 3210, of Redwood City, held a regular business meeting and initiation last Tuesday evening in its hall in Redwood City.

Among the class of ten recruits to be admitted to the Post were Charles W. Palmer and E. S. Langborgh,of Menlo Park. The impressive initiatory work was put on by the degree team of Alan Nichols Post of Palo Alto.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments, consisting of sandwiches and coffee were served.

Many veterans of Menlo Park belong to both Nichols Post in Palo Alto or Wilson Post of Redwood City. Both of these Posts and their Auxiliaries are in a flourishing condition, and are dong much for the welfare of veterans at large, and both are making every effort to build up, and are welcoming all men who have served the United States in the army, navy or marine corps, on foreign soil or in foreign waters to their ranks.

LEGION CARD PARTY IS BIG FINANCIAL SUCCESS—NEXT PARTY WEDNESDAY 12th

The card party held in the Grammar school auditorium on Wednesday night was a success in a great big way, and was a wonderful beginning of the series to be given jointly by the Post and Auxiliary of Menlo Park. The next party will be at the same place on February 12. Those who were unable to attend the first party can, by paying twenty-five cents for a score card, obtain a liberal score that will add materially to the final count. The public is cordially invited to these entertainments and a good time is assured.

Jack Baust of San Jose is now living in the duplex apartment at 84 Santa Cruz avenue, with his familyy.

Boy Scout Service At Presbyterian Church

Next Sunday is the beginning of "Boy Scout Week" and will be observed as such by the local Presbyterian church on Santa Cruz avenue. Menlo Park Troop No. 107, will attend the morning worship service at 11 o'clock.

Scoutmaster Beach will be in charge of the Troop at the service which will open with the Salute to the Flag andand the Scout oath.

Rev. W. L. Staub will speak on Scouting and its effect on the lives of those engaged in the movement, telling of the Scout Laws and other high ideals of the organization. The service will close with the Scout Benediction. The choir will sing "Great and Marvelous."

Sunday school will eonvene at 9:45 a. m., with John Heltzel in charge.

Junior Christian Endeavor will meet at 11 o'clock in charge of Mrs. H. H. Bearch.

Senior Christian Endeavor convenes at 6:30 p. m. with Etta McDonald leading.

At the evening worship period at 7:30 Mr. Bert Leach will speak against war and the choir will sing "Arise, Shine."

The public is invited to attend these services.

FATHER THOMAS J. McKEON ORDAINED TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO, IN MENLO

Just twenty-two years ago four priests were ordained at St. Patrick's Seminary at Menlo Park as follows: Thomas J. McKeon, Patrick Moriarty, John Gibboney and Aidan A. Doyle.

Father Thomas J. McKeon is now the pastor of The Church of the Nativity in this city and is loved and revered by all who know him for his kindly manner and the zeal with which he carries on his work as pastor of the flourishing parish.

A GOOD SUGGESTION COMES AT TIMELY SEASON—TRY IT

It has been suggested that through the press residents be asked to cooperate in beautifying their yards and curbs by planting bright flowers thereby creating a "Menlo Beautiful."

It is also suggested that property owners use a discing machine to clean the lots of grass rather than burn it, as has been the custom in the past. This will greatly reduce the fire hazard and add materially to the appearance of the city (yours and mine). Think it over, then have a talk with the city officials.

HARRY MOREY SENIOR IS RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Harry Morey, Sr., of the Peninsula Building Material Company was rushed to the Palo Alto Hospital Monday where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. He is reported as dowing as well as can be expected.

County Publishers Meet In Menlo Park

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris, of the Menlo Park Recorder were hosts at the monthly dinner session of the San Mateo County Press Association, held at Bertrand's Oakwood Inn, on Middlefield Road on Monday evening.

Following the dinner which was as usual with Bertrand's, the last word in the culinary art, those present engaged in social conversation for a short period before the business of the evening was taken up. The table was decorated with beautiful pink Japanese peach blossoms.

Many problems relative to the betterment of the newspapers and looking to better reader service were discussed. Among other subjects to come up was that of local printing, either city, county or commercial, going out of the county, it was pointed out that the work could all be handled locally and as cheaply in the county as outside.

A resolution was passed relative to political printing at the coming election with regad to having the work done at home. The resolution calls for the words "Printed in San Mateo County" to appear on all political printing and advertising.

W. E. Pitschke presided. In attendance were A. B. Cargill, Burlingame Advance; Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris, Menlo Park Recorder; Mrs. E. E. Bramble, South San Francisco Enterprise; George Dunn Sr., and George Dunn Jr., Half Moon Bay Review; Mr. and Mrs Sam Winklebleck, Redwood City Tribune; Mr. and Mrs. H. Butler, San Mateo Times; Mr. and Mrs. W E. Pitschke, Daly City Record; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Elston, San Bruno Herald; Hiram Cook, San Carlos Enquirer; and Edwin Wilder of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association.

James Hedge, president of the board of trustees of Sequoia high school, will preside over the meeting.

Citizens are urged to attend this meeting.

JACK TUTTLE FORSAKES THE RANKS OF BENEDICTS

MARRIED — Miss Frances Lynwood McAtee, to John Tuttle of the Menlo Park Postoffice, August 3, 1935, at San Juan Bautista Mission.

While the above notice has caused no little surprise among the many friends of the popular postal employee, it is remarked that "wonders will never cease." The happy young couple are the recipients of the good wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy married life.

The card party given by the Cathay Unit, American Legion Auxiliary of San Francisco in the War Memorial Building on Wednesday night was a very delightful affair and liberally patronized. During the social hour a Chinese supper was served, consisting of chow mein, tea wafers and candy. Those attending from Menlo Park Unit were Mrs. Dora Scott Devol, Mrs. Ethel French, Mrs. Irene Boone and Miss E. Noel.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris spent Sunday in Berkeley with friends.

Few people know who the Liberty Bell became cracked. It was in the year of 1835 while the bell was being tolled for the death of Chief Justice Marshall that the second disaster ocurred to our now treasurede possession.

During the Revolutionary War while the English soldiers were taking possession of the city of Philadelphia, the heroic Americans hid the Liberty Bell in the Delaware River.

Inventors and manufacturers are constantly on the alert to give us speed. But with all our speed it is nearly an absolute fact that we shall never be able to travel to the nearest star. Let us see—we measure distance in the astronomical sphere through light years. First—one light year, if represented by miles, would be about 6 trillion miles. The nearest known star is more than four light years—how would you like to take a trip with me sometime—oh say, any old star.

Superstitions may come and go but the number "thirteen" will likely stay with us forever. We hear so many people say, "No, I won't have it, not a thirteen." This superstition is so strong in the city of Paris that no house is given this number. It is believed that this dread of "13" started from the Lord's last supper. At this supper there were Christ and his twelve disciples. One of them betrayed him.

Be Captains of the Road

There is an unwritten law of the sea that is followed religiously — namely, the desire to save life. Why can't we have the same high purpost on land?

Such voluntary action is always based on necessity. Life-saving in automobile traffic is now as important as life-saving in sea traffic. Such rules as the following, adhered to with sincerity, would save life a hundred-fold.

1. Before making a turn, get in trafc lane nearest desired direction.

2. The rear vision mirror is for somehting beside looking for traffic officers—watch cars behind you.

3. Never take chances in passing and do not crowd the right-of-way. Saving seconds is no excuse for causing one unnecessary rick of life.

4. Lear the feel of the car on the road, like the captain does his ship. Study the action of the car on the dry pavement, wet pavement, gravel road and icy road. Even the highest ability is not one hundred per cent perfect in driving.

5. Take driving seriously; you are probably no smarter than the last person whose neck was broken on a windshield. The smartest men (supposedly) meet with unfortunate disaster through gross carelessness.

Courtesy is not a sign of weakness; it is a sign of character and wisdom, and the ability to be foresignted and obliging.

The sea captain doesn't unnecessarily take chances when they can be avoided, but he willingly risks his life and his ship to prevent an accident or aid another vessel in distress. -But automobile drivers wilfully risk their own lives as well as the lives of others, for no good reason at all; it doesn't make sense.

If ordinary rules of common sense and courtesy were followed in driving (unwritten laws), accidents would be caused only by freak circumstances.

San Mateo County Gets $56,230 From Gas Tax

San Mateo county today was alcted $56,230.08 for its quarterly share of the state gasoline tax fund. The amount is for the last three months of 1935. State Controller Ray L. Riley announced the apportionment in Sacramento.

Riley stated the gasoline tax collections for the year amounted to $39,838,000.

Other nearby counties received funds as follows: Santa Clara, $105,760.23; San Francisco, $245,—816.07; Santa Cruz, $34,687.60.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Bryant street and Forest avenue, Palo Alto. Sunday services at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m.

Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

"Spirit" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, February 9, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God" (I Cor. 2: 10). Other Bible citations will include: "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man wnich is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God" (I Cor. 2: 11-12).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The suppositional antipode of divine infinite Spirit is the so-called human soul or spirit, in other words the five senses,—the flesh that warreth against Spirit. These so called material senses must yield to the infinite Spirit, named God" (p. 200).

THEIR NAME IS LEGION

Vast Variety of Foods Now Come In Tin Cans

HAVE you ever stopped to consider the vast variety of foods that are now available in tin cans? The kinds of canned food, including the different varieties of the same product, now number about three hundred and include fruits, vegetables, meats, fish and shell fish, specialties and ready-to-serve entrées.

All these foods are prepared for you by strictly modern scientific methods. Their selection for canning is carefully made, canning plants are located in the parts of the country that are the best production areas, and the foods are harvested at their prime.

Canning Is Cooking

The foods are put into new cans, then sealed air-tight, and the right amount of heat, applied for the proper length of time, makes them keep. No further cooking of the foods is necessary. They are ready for use as soon as opened, and are perfect foundations for making interesting and unusual dishes.

Moreover, the entire contents of every can is food. There are no trimmings to throw away, and no time is required to clean or cull them. Little or no fuel is needed to prepare them for the table, and, stored at home, canned foods will keep as long as the can is unopened.

Finally the food value of products in cans is as high as that of similar fresh foods cooked in the home, according to scientists who have studied nutrition. The liquid in the can is food, too. And vitamins are retained in canned foods as much as in similar foods cooked at home.

Vegetables and Fruits

The vegetables that can be obtained in cans include artichokes, asparagus, beans, beets, Brussels sprouts, carrots, cauliflower, celery, corn, hominy, kale, lentils, mixed vegetables, mushrooms, mustard greens, okra, onions, parsnips, peas, peppers, pimientos, potatoes, pumpkin, rice, sauerkraut, spinach, squash, tomatoes, turnips, turnip greens and whole wheat.

The fruits include apples, apricots, blackberries, blueberries, cherries, cocoanut, cranberries, currants, figs, gooseberries, grapes, grapefruit, loganberries, peaches, pears, pineapples, plums, prunes, quince, raisins, raspberries and rhubarb.

And it must be remembered that the above enumerations do not include the many forms and combinations in which a number of these foods come in cans.

Fish and Meats

The fish found in cans include anchovies, caviar, clams, cod fish, crabs, haddock, herrings, lobsters, mackerel, oysters, roe, salmon, sardines, shad, shrimp, tuna and turtle, several of them in various forms.

The meats include bacon, beef, chicken, frankfurters, ham, hash, liver, mutton, pig's feet, potted meats, sausage, squab, tongue, tripe, turkey and veal, and here again the forms are varied.

Specialties and Soups

The canned specialties include Boston brown bread, catsup, cider, cheese, chili con carne, chili sauce, chow chow, clam cakes and juice, whipping cream, fiskebolle, fruit cake, grapefruit juice, jams, Japanese crabmeat, jellies, lobster paste, malt syrup, marmalades, milk, condensed and evaporated, mince, molasses, olives, orange juice, pickles, pineapple juice, popcorn, fig and plum puddings, relish, sandwich spreads, sauerkraut juice, smoked boneless herrings, spaghetti, spiced and pickled fruits, whole squab, syrup, tamales and tomato juice, paste and sauce,

The soups are asparagus, beef, bouillon, celery, chicken, clam broth, clam chowder, consommé, creamed soups, Julienne, Madrilene, minestrone, mulligatawny, mushroom, mutton broth, noodle, okra, onion, oxtail, oyster, pea, pepper pot, purées, soup stock, strained vegetable, tomato, green and mock turtle, vegetable and vermicelli.

Ready-Made Entrées

These include beef à la mode, chicken à la king, chicken curry, chop suey, Hungarian goulash, lobster Newburgh, a whole rice dinner and Irish stew. Of course millions of cans of vacuum packed coffee and of beer in keglined cans are also consumed, but these do not classify under the foregoing headings.

Not every grocer carries all of the varieties of canned foods, but he can and will obtain any special item in the above enumeration that you want.*

SUMMER SALADS in new dresses

OF course you know the kinds of salads you want to serve this summer. They're much the same salads as you served last summer—tender green things like cucumbers, for instance. But even salads have their feelings. They begin to sulk if you don't give them a new dress now and then. And that sulky look is reflected on the faces of those who eat them and mentally, if not vocally, rebel at the "same old thing."

Fool 'em! Get a new dress or a new garnish or a new ingredient for a well-known salad, and you'll never see a sulky look. Take cucumbers. You've served them in a gelatin salad perhaps, but have you ever served them in a combination with pineapple like this:

Jellied Cucumber and Pineapple Salad: Soak two tablespoons gelatin in cold water five minutes, then dissolve in one cup boiling water. Add one-third cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup vinegar and the juice from half a lemon. When cold and beginning to stiffen, add one cup grated cucumber and one cup crushed pineapple, and pour into a shallow, wet pan. When ready to serve, cut in cubes and serve on lettuce. Garnish with whole pecans and cream mayonnaise. Serves eight.

A New Red Dress

Give the alligator pear, always popular for summer salads, a new red dress. Here's the way:

Alligator Pear Salad with Tomato Dressing: Keep alligator pears very cold, and prepare at the last minute, to avoid discoloring. Then halve, stone and pare, and arrange hollow side up in a bed of crisp cress. Garnish with ripe olives and strips of pimiento and pour over this ice cold.

Tomato Dressing: Mix well and chill six tablespoons olive oil, two teaspoons lemon juice, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika and two tablespoons canned catsup. Pour over the pear just before serving.*

Transforming the Common Task

IT IS safe to say that the great majority of individuals perform the usual routine duties over and over again. It is not difficult for them to foresee when they arise in the morning just what the day's work will be, and if the work is of a somewhat uninteresting character the performance of it may be allowed to descend into a mere perfunctory operation, a mechanical round, which affords little pleasure to the individual.

There are few things more delightful than the ability to look forward to one's daily work and to enter upon it with zest and spontaneity. The "trivial round, the common task," becomes transformed when performed in this way. Sloth is banished, and any sense of drudgery abolished. Duties which might otherwise seem monotonous or arduous, if not indeed onerous, are lightened when the heart, having learned something of the true nature of service, sings at its work. . . .

George Herbert must have recognized this fact when he wrote,

"Who sweeps a room as for
Thy laws
Makes that and the action
fine."

Indeed, the efficient performance of our present task is often the first step towards the gaining of a more responsible and congenial one. Improvement in any phase of our experience must begin right where we are. Today, the present moment, is ours in which to make a new beginning from which to transform our activity in the "trivial round, the common task," into something approximating perfection.

The keynote of such transformation lies in an apprehension of the truth about God and man's relationship to Him. As it is seen that God, Spirit, is the author or creator of spiritual perfection only, as must inevitably be the case, it is also seen that the man of His creating must be, and is, spiritual and perfect; for like can only produce like. What a new and delightful incentive for righteous and useful living comes with such a revelation! How changed becomes one's outlook upon life in general! Not personal aggrandizement or gain, but opportunity for helpful service becomes one's chief concern. Unselfed love has been admitted into thought, and has begun its benevolent reign in our everyday experience. No greater blessing could possibly be ours.

It has been truly said that in the study of astronomy it is necessary to take one's mental stand outside of the earth before a correct view of the universe can be gained. In like manner it is impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of our surroundings or environment until we mentally posit ourselves outside of matter. To the extent that this is done are we able to appraise things for just what they are, for then have we gained a new standard of values. Unimportant things no longer concern us unduly. We are not swayed or disturbed by trifles. Our grasp on spiritual reality steadies judgment, purifies purpose, and clarifies vision. Is it any wonder that he who is attaining this poise and consequent efficiency finds himself in greater demand to fill useful and responsible positions? The Bible promise (Matthew 25:23), "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things," may be proved by each one of us today.

This being "faithful over a few things" may be the very thing which is testing our mettle and proving our trustworthiness. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 323) Mary Baker Eddy writes, "If 'faithful over a few things,' we shall be made rulers over many; but the one unused talent decays and is lost."

Is the only talent which we seem to possess the ability to perform some simple task well and efficiently today, and to do the next thing that comes to hand and do it thoroughly? Then we should use it. Such use fits us for a wider sphere of action, and at the same time transforms our present experience into something uplifting and ennobling. Mrs. Eddy also writes in her work "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 116), "Never absent from your post, never off guard, never ill-humored, never unready to work for God,—is obedience; being 'faithful over a few things.'" Such labor constitutes working "as for Thy laws," and ensures its own reward.—The Christian Science Monitor.
